Headline:
Cloudy start, with hill fog. Sunny spells developing inland.

Today:
Cloudy start, especially across Derbyshire hills with some hill fog, but also a few brighter spells. Cloud thinning more readily than on Wednesday, with sunny spells developing by the afternoon. Many coastal areas likely staying rather cloudy however. Maximum temperature 19 deg C (66 deg F).

Tonight:
Clear spells at first, leading to a rather chilly feel inland, however cloud likely spreading westwards and thickening overnight. Mostly dry, but perhaps the odd spot of drizzle after midnight. Minimum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Friday:
Another cloudy start for many, before brighter or warm sunny intervals develop. The best of these will again be across western parts, whilst parts of Lincolnshire will likely stay cloudy. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cloudy but mostly dry start Saturday, with sunny spells developing. Winds strengthening Sunday, staying dry with warm sunny spells. Low confidence Monday, but likely dry, breezy, with warm sunny spells.
